Messrs Chapman 348 Pine Phila Pa

Gentlemen:

I have yours of 12th relative to that No 394 which I claimed to have bid .25 for and which you deny; and deny in terms that indicate you are offended that I should make remarks even in jest, at a possible hole in your skimmer.

Now I am bound to believe you when you state that I did not bid on No 394. It is up to me now to state these facts: When I receive a Catalogue I go through it cursorily — checking off items that seem desirable — thus "✓". Later I go over it carefully looking up prices, and if I think to bid on the item I note in pencil the rough price. Next day I go over it all again; — then I copy off onto another paper all the items priced and add them up. Upon this comprehension - viz - I go over the proposed bids again - raise or lower the figures or cross off lately and when adjusted the bidding sheet is copied off, and at same time a circle in ink is placed around the figures in the catalogue - thus (1) (2) (3). The bidding sheet is sent to you, but I have remaining the paper with the alterations and erasures and the increased bids that are copied off and sent; also I have the Catalogue with its bids in circles as above. Now in case of the "394, in the Catalogue is noted (2) showing that the first estimate of value was affirmed and actually made. This marked catalogue together with the revised sheet, with, and "394 - 125" standing increased, - constitute good basis for the affirmation that the bid was made.

Still, I am aware that I am liable to mistakes, - there are holes in my strainer if not in yours; and if I did not - by "394 125, - it was a clear case of omitting to cal an tem duly noted and settled upon

You say you do not like the meaning implied by the words "holes in your skimmer" and ask, in a rather offended way, to "be more careful about mentioning a fault" &c. There was no meaning intended than that you had accidentally lost my bid. It is not likely you would omit "25 and take "100 except by accident. The conclusion therefore is that when "394 - .25 was omitted from my order, the hole was in my skimmer and not in yours; - and there I propose to leave the matter; thankful that the hole was a hole, for I don't want the corn; and devoutly wishing that many another bid had been holes, also.

Yours truly

Gentlemen

I return at your request the old bill head, which omits the .10 that I intended to bid on, V which is noted in my memo. as bid for. The mistake is clearly my own, - of omission.

You kindly offer to supply the type of wire from your stock: no, do not bother about it; as I stated I did not seriously care for the wire.

Yours truly

W. G. Wright
